REPUBLIC SPECIAL. Harrisburg, Ill., April 18.—The fury in the murder, returned a verdict this morning murder, returned a verdict this morning finding him guilty and fixing his sentence at twenty-four years in the Penitentiary. The case occupied the Circuit Court since Monday. Two days were consumed in get-ting a jury. The crime for which Luster was convicted was committed on the night of November

Who is on trial at Harrisburg, Ill., on the charge of killing William Travis at Leadford, Ill., on November 23, 1901.

23 at Ledford, III., four miles south of this city. Luster had been drinking, and, going to the railway station at that place, de-manded admittance of J. D. Travis, the stamanded admittance of J. E. Travis, the station agent. Travis refused to admit him, when Luster became violent and attempted to kick the door in. Travis opened the door and the two became involved in a fight, in which Luster was pretty severely used up.
Luster went to his home, procured a shotgun, and, returning to the depot, shot at Travis through the window, blowing the top of his head off. He was captured by Sheriff Barter and a posse of citizens and brought to this city and landed in jail.

The case was given to the jury last night, and, after deliberating twelve hours, returned a verdict. The prisoner gave evidence of great joy over the lightness of the sentence.

WALLACE SPOKE AT MACON.

Said the Paramount Issue Now Is Commercial Freedom.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Macon, Mo. April 18.—A large and en-thusiastic audience, many in the crowd be-ing ladies, greeted W. H. Wallace of Kanass City, in the Macon Circuit Courtroom to-day. Mr. Wallace had just arrived from Fayette. He was in good spirits and kept his crowd highly interested for over two hours. He was introduced by Major B. R.

his crowd highly interested for over two hours. He was introduced by Major B. R. Dysart, a prominent attorney.

Mr. Walace said that it had been his habit during the course of his speeches to refer to the fact that he had voted for Palmer and Buckner in 1896. He said he did this because he thought honesty demanded it, but it was not a matter of boast with him at all. In several places where this statement had been made, he said, it had been singled out by correspondents and wired to the papers as a seastional utterance. He said he had voted for Bryan in 1900, and advised Democrats to close up the gaps and go for the common enemy, the Republicans, and quite fighting among themselves. The Democratic party, he said, had many real live issues; in fact, had issues to burn, but the paramont one was trusts and monopolles. He said that in years gone by the ancients had fought for and secured personal liberty. Later on the gigantic struggle for religious liberty was fought and won in Europe. Now, the issue up to the Democratic party and all lovers of freedom was the fight for commercial liberty.
